Changes to our mental health can sometimes affect children and their wellbeing. They may pick up on your anxiety or low mood. This doesn't mean you should hide or minimise your feelings. You can try to explain them using phrases like, "It's ok to get big feelings, everyone gets big feelings but it's still the grown up's job to look after the children" or "if grownup's get big feelings it's not your fault- we can ask other grown-ups for help with our feelings."

When things are different to what we're used to and everyone is going through a big change, it's important to give children reassurance and support. Looking after your own mental health is vital to their well-being, so don't be afraid to try new things together or feel worried about doing something for yourself to take care of your own wellbeing. And reach out if you need help.

What is mental health?

We all have a 'small' feeling every day. These sometimes feel strong and overwhelming, whether happy or sad, but they go away before too long. Sometimes we experience 'big' feelings: These feel strong and overwhelming for a long time. They stop us doing what we want to in our lives.

How can help my child's mental health?

- 1. Make conversations about mental health a normal part of life: Anywhere is a good place to talk; in the car, walking the dog or cooking together. Model everyday talk about feelings such as by talking about a TV character's feelings.
- 2. Give your full attention: We all know it's horrible to be half listened to. Keep eye contact, focus on the child and ignore distractions.
- 3. Check your body language: Try to keep it open and relaxed and make sure you come down to the child's level.
- 4. Take it seriously: Don't downplay what the child is saying or tell them they're "just being silly". Resist the urge to reassure them that everything is fine.
- 5. Ask open questions: Such as "How did your day go today?" This will help to extend the conversation.
- 6. Calmly stay with the feelings that arise: It can be our automatic reaction to steer away from difficult emotions.
- 7. Offer empathy rather than solutions: Show that you accept what they are telling you but don't try to solve the problem.
- 8. Remember we are all different: Respect and value the child's feelings, even though they may be different to yours.
- 9. Look for clues about feelings: Listen to the child's words, tone of voice and body language.
- 10. Some ways to start a conversation about feelings might be: "How are you feeling at the moment?" "You don't seem your usual self. Do you want to talk about it?" "I'm happy to listen if you need a chat."

Philippians 4:8

Finally, brothers, whatever is true, whatever is honourable, whatever is just, whatever is pure, whatever is lovely, whatever is commendable, if there is any excellence, if there is anything worthy of praise, think about these things.
